Local Girls Enjoy Camp at Big Pines

Camp Teresita Pines, in the Big Pines area of Los Angeles National Forest, is being enjoyed by a large group of young girls from the South Bay area, all members of the Juniorsettes and Junior Court Our Lady of Victory 1344.

The girls camp was started at the request of the Archbishop over thirty years ago for all girls of camping age and is still maintained as a camping facility for girls of all races and creeds. It is supported by the Catholic Daughters of the Archdiocese of Los Angeles.

For some of the girls leaving last Saturday this is their first experience at being away from home and family, for others it is their second and third camping trip, and for the older girls, reaching the age of 16, it will be their last trip as campers. They will return to the camp to serve as junior counselors in the years ahead.

During their days at Teresita Pines, the girls enjoy swimming, hiking, handicrafts, horseback riding, overnight campouts, and classes in drama.

The day is always concluded with the girls gathered around the campfire for singing, stories and camp pep songs.

Junior Woman's Club Chairman

Lists Tips for Safe Vacations

Wide-eyed youngsters with the habit of putting things in their mouths or adults who might become careless for a moment are urged to read and take heed of the safety hints prepared by the Torrance Junior Woman's Club's Safety Chairman, Mrs. Wayne Lynch.

Topping her list of "killers" are common plants found in most gardens, such as hyacinth, narcissus, daffodil, autumn crocus of which the bulb is the toxic part and can be fatal; oleander, poinsettia, lily-of-the-valley, foxglove, rhubarb, rhododendron, azaleas, the leaves of which, if eaten are extremely poisonous.

Mrs. Lynch points out that seeds from such plants as castor bean, rosary pea, larkspur, and wisteria contain lethal doses for children or adults.

Research by the safety chairman also disclosed that berries from mistletoe plants, daphne, jessamine, lantana, yew poison hemlock, nightshade and jimson weed contain enough toxic acid to cause serious illness or death.

During summer, with families vacationing in unfamiliar areas, Mrs. Lynch urges an alertness to trees and shrubs such as wild cherry, oak, elderberry and black locust, all of which contain poisonous substances in twigs, foliage, and bark.

In preparing the Safety memorandum, the clubwoman also urges a check of cupboards in the home, pointing out that all dangerous substances should be locked up, do not store poisonous substances in food or beverage containers; read all labels and follow directions; be sure all poisons are clearly marked; use adequate ventilation when using weed killers and cleansing fluids.

In giving medicine, Mrs. Lynch urges readers not to take or give medicine in the dark; do not take medicine from an unlabeled bottle; date all drug supplies; weed out the left-overs regularly; use a prescription drug only for the patient for whom the physician has ordered it.

HOW EASY IT CAN HAPPEN

Safety around the home and garden has been a topic for research by the Torrance Junior Woman's Club under the direction of Mrs. Wayne Lynch, safety chairman. Many popular garden plants have been found to be poisonous, as well as certain trees and shrubs. How easily accidents can happen is portrayed as Mr. and Mrs. Lynch in their yard become engrossed in the list of poisonous plants, as their son, Scott, 8 months, crawls towards a poisonous plant.
